President Trump Donald John Trump Biden says voters should choose who nominates Supreme Court justice Trump, Biden will not shake hands at first debate due to COVID-19 Pelosi: Trump Supreme Court pick 'threatens' Affordable Care Act MORE said Tuesday he is open to at least considering pardons for National Security Council staffer Lt. Col. Alexander Vindman Alexander Vindman Impeachment witness Alexander Vindman calls Trump Putin's 'useful idiot' The Hill's Morning Report - Sponsored by The Air Line Pilots Association - Trump, Biden renew push for Latino support Strzok: Trump behaving like an authoritarian MORE. "Pardons are something that I don't want to rule out," the president told reporters on the South Lawn. "Alexander Vindman, I don't know anything about. I haven't heard it at all. If somebody did something wrong, it's a pardon for them," he added. ADVERTISEMENT Vindman, a National Security Council aide to the president's son, Rudy Giuliani, told House investigators he overheard two other White House staffers discussing Trump's conversation with Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky, The Washington Post reported Monday. Giuliani and Attorney General William Barr Bill Barr Prosecutor says no charges in Michigan toilet voting display Judge rules Snowden to give up millions from book, film and speeches The Hill's Morning Report - Sponsored by Facebook - Washington on edge amid SCOTUS vacancy MORE indicated they did not know if that information was accurate, but Vindman did not tell them. Vindman said he also informed the NSC's lead counsel. Vindman came to the president's attention after he testified in the House impeachment inquiry that he raised concerns internally about the president's conduct during his July call with Zelensky, according to the Post. Trump blasted Vindman's testimony and
